

I used to ask you for money.

I was a homeless drunk. I begged for money. I told you it was for food—or to catch a bus home—but I lied.

I spent that money on booze. On crack. And though I know you were well-meaning, you didn't help me.

What I needed was treatment for my addiction.

Instead of giving your money to a street drunk—and keeping him sick—instead use your change to support Ann Arbor's Outreach efforts—so every alcoholic or addict who needs help can get it.

Loose change for real change.
